

Parliament not allude to local government for Ireland, Gladstone will move an amendment to the Royal Address, that such a measure for Ireland is necessary, and the Parliament will support the action. Gladstone will then take office and introduce a bill granting home rule to Ireland.

LONDON, 18th December.
The excitement throughout Great Britain on the subject of Home Rule for Ireland continues without abatement. Newspapers of all shades of opinion and politics are urging a measure to speak definitely in regard to his plan. The late Premier, in response to a telegram sent today asking him for information with reference to the Irish Home Rule scheme, which he is reported to have had under consideration for some time, replied as follows: "From my public declarations at Edinburgh respecting the Government of Ireland, you will easily see that I have no further consideration to give to the subject."

It will be remembered that in the speech referred to, which he delivered on November 1st, he said in effect, in reply to Parliament's suggestion to give local self-government to Ireland, that when he learns through a constitutional channel what the wishes of Ireland are, he will give them attentive consideration, but he cannot gain this knowledge until the next Parliament meets. G. J. Goschen, who has been asked to give an opinion on the reported scheme for home rule for Ireland, replied by telegram that he maintained his hitherto expressed conviction against home rule and could not support on any scheme of that nature until such scheme had been fully declared.

The Marquis of Hartington declares that he has not approved the scheme, as had been intimated in certain quarters.

The Post's London special correspondent affirms the accuracy of his outline of Gladstone's scheme. He explains in detail the details of the scheme, but a general contradiction is impossible, since any source of information was only one degree less authoritative than if Gladstone had told the facts himself.

The City of Armagh, in the province of Ulster, was today the point of an immense loyalist demonstration. The meeting adopted a resolution expressing the hope that a recent to home rule principles would be certain, sooner or later, to avert in civil war and exhorting the loyalist party to the utmost length in resisting the effects of the home rule advocates. The resolutions also commended the loyalists in Ireland to the sympathy of Protestants throughout the British Kingdom. More than one of the speakers boasted with a degree of earnestness that around repeated cheers from the loyalists, the loyalist party in Ireland was ready to meet whatever is due might be presented. "The Ulster Orangemen are ready to come to the front," one of the speakers said, "and great applauses and when their services are wanted, 50,000 men can readily be put into the field for active service in defence of loyalty to the Government."

The young man was handsome and the young lady very attractive. The result was an elopement, which occurred early in November, and the groom became a bridegroom. The runaway was finally captured in Dublin, where Hobart had obtained employment as a managing director of a jewelry store. The young lady was sent back to her father's care. The body of the victim was cut into pieces and the remains were scattered in a suburban wood. The blood was boiled into black puddings, which were sold in Tizio's shop. He made a confession to-day.
